Kentucky Produce Auctions and Regional Terminal Markets: An Analysis of Demand Conditions

Thomas Pierce
Department of Agricultural Economics, University of Kentucky

Background

- Produce Auctions give small, diversified producers a market channel for fresh produce
- The price response of auctions to Terminal Markets has not been studied to a large extent
- This analysis utilizes data on US #1 tomatoes from the Fairview Produce Auction (FPA) in Christian County, KY
- The data from FPA is compared to corresponding data from Atlanta (ATL) and Chicago (CHI) Terminal Markets

Produce Auctions in Kentucky and Surrounding Areas

Avg market prices for US #1 Tomatoes at ATL & CHI Terminal Markets & Fairview Produce Auction

Price Trends

2017-2021 Produce Auction (FPA) and Atlanta Terminal Market (ATL) Prices

Data

- Usable data from Fairview Produce Auction (FPA) included weeks 17-43 of each year from 2017-2021
- Weeks and years were created as dummy variables, Week 29 was chosen as the reference week as it had the highest average quantity sold at FPA across 2017-2021
- 2019 was chosen as the reference year because it displayed the average price across years and had no abnormal market events

Observations

- On average, a $1 price increase at the Atlanta Terminal Market would lead to a $0.49 increase in price at Fairview Produce Auction
- There is a slight negative relationship between quantity and price at auction, as expected
- 2020 showed higher prices across the board for #1 Tomatoes

Analysis

- Weeks: Showed expected trend of high price response early in the season when quantities are restricted, lessens throughout season with some variation
- Years: 2021 closest to being what producers expect at Produce Auction- traditional "U" shape. Other years not consistent with this hypothesis, further research is needed
- Markets: Chicago data likely not significant because of inconsistencies in data, further data collection is needed
