1.1 Introduction

This project started with a simple question, “How many food companies are there in Minnesota?” Given Minnesota’s history of flour milling, dairy, meat slaughtering, grain shipping, and their extensions into food processing and retailing, most people would say “a lot,” at least 400? Surely it is enough to give us bragging rights for being the heart of the food industry in the U.S. Three of the top five Fortune 500 Companies in Minnesota are food companies (SUPERVALU, CHS and Target).ⁱ Seven of the 19 Fortune 500 Companies (37%) in Minnesota are food companies including Cargill.ⁱⁱ This is a higher percentage than any other state except for Arkansas, which has only five Fortune 500 companies and two (40%) are food companies (Wal-Mart and Tyson).

At The Food Industry Center, we decided to look at the data and count the number of food companies in Minnesota. What did we learn?

- We learned that this simple question has no simple or permanent answer.
- We learned that counting companies is different from counting establishments.
- We learned that one cannot rely on databases alone since some well known companies do not appear in databases that count only publicly traded companies.
- The final estimated count is 2,357 food companies in the state of Minnesota using 2008-2009 data from Dun and Bradstreet, Inc.
- We do not include the more than 81,000 Minnesota farms, but counted almost any post farm gate handler/seller of food like grain elevators, brokers, and warehouses who have food as a primary component of their business.

The count, however, depends on how you classify food companies and how much local knowledge you have. This report explains who they are, how they were counted and what they contribute to the state of Minnesota in terms of sales revenue and employment. It does not compare numbers to other states or to the US.

1.2 How did we Count Food Companies?

It is important to understand WHAT has been counted for this report. First, we established a database for food companies in Minnesota, identifying all food related industrial and business units located in Minnesota. To do so, we used the U.S. North American Industrial Classification System (NAICS) codes established by the U.S. Census Bureau (<http://www.census.gov/eos/www/naics/>) to filter ‘food only’ records from the Million Dollar Database on the Internet (MDDI) from Dun and Bradstreet, Inc (<http://www.dnbmdd.com/mddi/>). The final extracted records in our database are either food or beverage manufacturers, processors, wholesalers, retailers (including convenience stores) or food service operations. Details of the selection criteria are located in this report’s appendix.

A record in MDDI can represent an ‘establishment’ or an ‘enterprise/company’. Although MDDI tries to link all establishments to their parent companies, the linkages are very often broken or not available, making it impossible to aggregate all establishments under one parent company. For our purposes, we treated all records in the MDDI, located in Minnesota, for which Annual Sales were reported equal to Corporate Sales, as an “ultimate company” of Minnesota. For example, International Dairy Queen Inc. which is headquartered in MN ultimately belongs to Berkshire Hathaway Inc. in Omaha, and is therefore not counted as a MN company. All ultimate companies of Minnesota are also either headquartered in the state or have a single location (such as Minnesota Soybean Processors). Unless otherwise mentioned, the counts here are companies (such as Cargill, Inc. and not subsidiaries under it (such as Cargill Animal Nutrition). Likewise, a company such as SUPERVALU Inc. is counted as one company; all the individual stores like the Cub Stores are not in this count. At times, we relied on local knowledge or corporate reports to complete the data.

There are other sources of information that cite different numbers than what is concluded in this report. For example, the web site, Food Companies in Minnesota, reports there are 1,289 food companies in Minnesota. In our opinion this is not a complete list and it includes several establishments as well companies. However, it does serve as another source of information.ⁱⁱⁱ Another source of information about the number of companies, wages and employees, and establishments in Minnesota can be found on the web site of the Minnesota Department of Employment and Economic Development.^{iv}

1.3 Overview of Food Companies in Minnesota

Table 1 shows the total number of Minnesota food companies organized by annual sales category along with their headquarter status, total annual sales dollars and employment in Minnesota for six sales (size of company) categories. Figures in parenthesis indicate percentage contribution of companies in each category to Total Annual Sales and Employment in Minnesota.

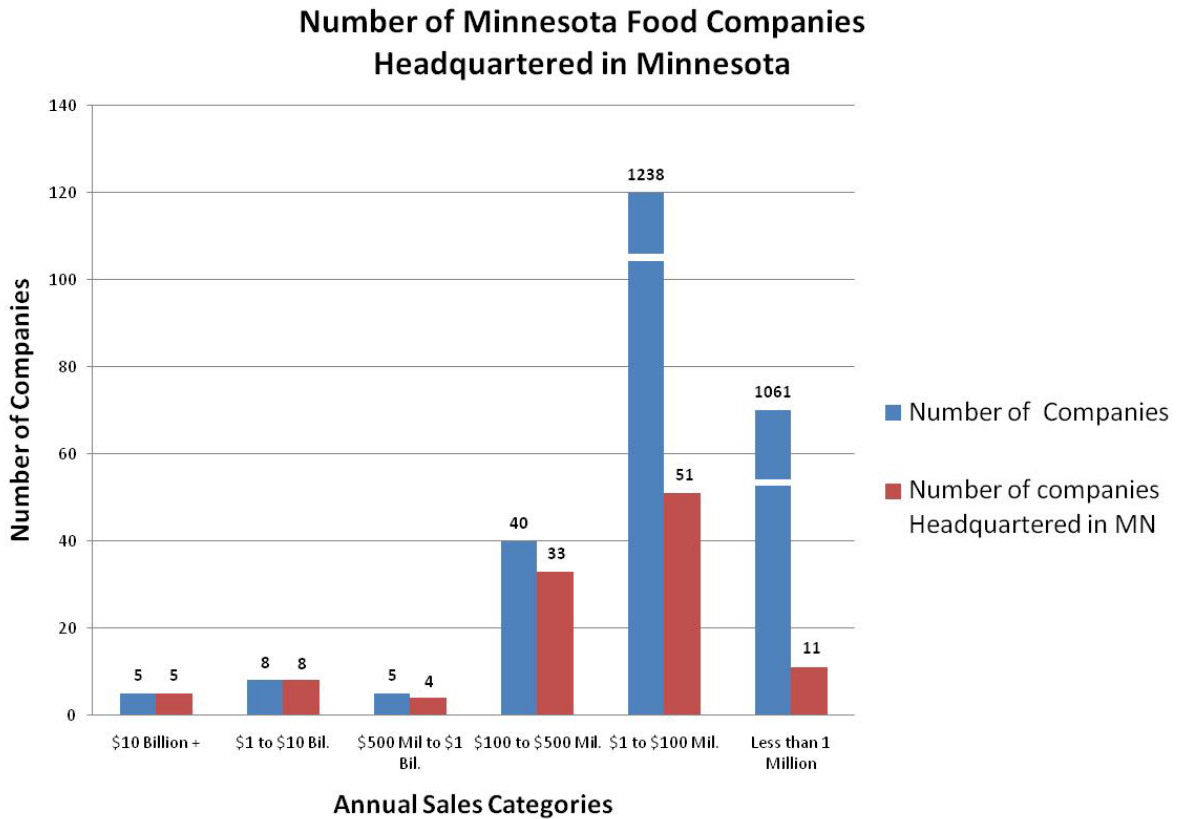

First observe that 112 or 5 percent of the companies listed have headquarters in the state. Eighty three percent of the annual sales and 28 percent of the employees belong to the top five companies (0.2% of the companies), whose sales are more than $10 Billion annually. The total sales generated by all Minnesota food companies are more than the gross state product in Minnesota ($262.9 B in 2008).^v This is partly because company sales for Minnesota based food companies are generated in other states and nations. The employment in Minnesota represents about 5 percent of the total number of employees in Minnesota (2,826,204).

The largest 18 companies, with more than $500 million in annual sales, make up only 1 % of the Minnesota food companies but employ 66,605 people, almost 41 percent of all the employment in this sector and generate almost 95% of all food sales. There are 1,238 companies in the $1 to $100 million annual sales range, comprising 52 percent of Minnesota food companies. Collectively they employ 56, 276 people or about 35% of all the people employed in this Minnesota industry.

1. Global ultimate company profile not listed in the Dun & Bradstreet data, or if listed had missing figures for sales.
2. Data provided by The Food Industry Center's contacts within the respective organizations.
3. Combines Lunds, Inc and Lunds Food Holdings

The top five Minnesota Food Companies are Fortune 500 companies except Cargill, which is not included in the Fortune 500 listing because it is a privately held company. If it were listed, it would be in the top 5.

1.5 Industry Segments: Food Companies by Position in Supply Chain

The supply chain segments for this report are based on the company's primary business activity (see Table 3). In the case of companies that did not have a global ultimate profile in the Dun & Bradstreet database, the classification is based on our understanding of their primary business.

Dividing the top 18 companies by segment of the food industry supply chain, finds 6 in the wholesale/retail sector (SUPERVALU, Target, Nash Finch, Coborn's, Holiday Co., and Lund's). Eleven of the top 18 food companies are in the food processing/manufacturing sector and one is a logistics company. The segment of the food supply chain that these companies operate in is difficult to classify because they tend to operate in multiple segments across the supply chain. For example, SUPERVALU and Nash Finch are both wholesalers and retailers and Schwans and Coburn's are food manufacturers, distributors, and retailers. CHS and Holiday Co. operate in both food and energy sectors. Three global companies headquartered in Minnesota operate in a number of segments around the world, notably, Cargill, General Mills, and Hormel.

Table 3 illustrates the number of companies that are classified food processors/manufacturers (192), wholesalers/distributors (310), retailer food companies (grocery) (496), and foodservice establishments (1,427). More than half of all the food companies are in the foodservice segment.

* Includes food companies whose primary activity (most revenue generator) does not fall in the first four columns, e.g. logistic provider, packaging, warehousing, and cold storages.

Figure 2:

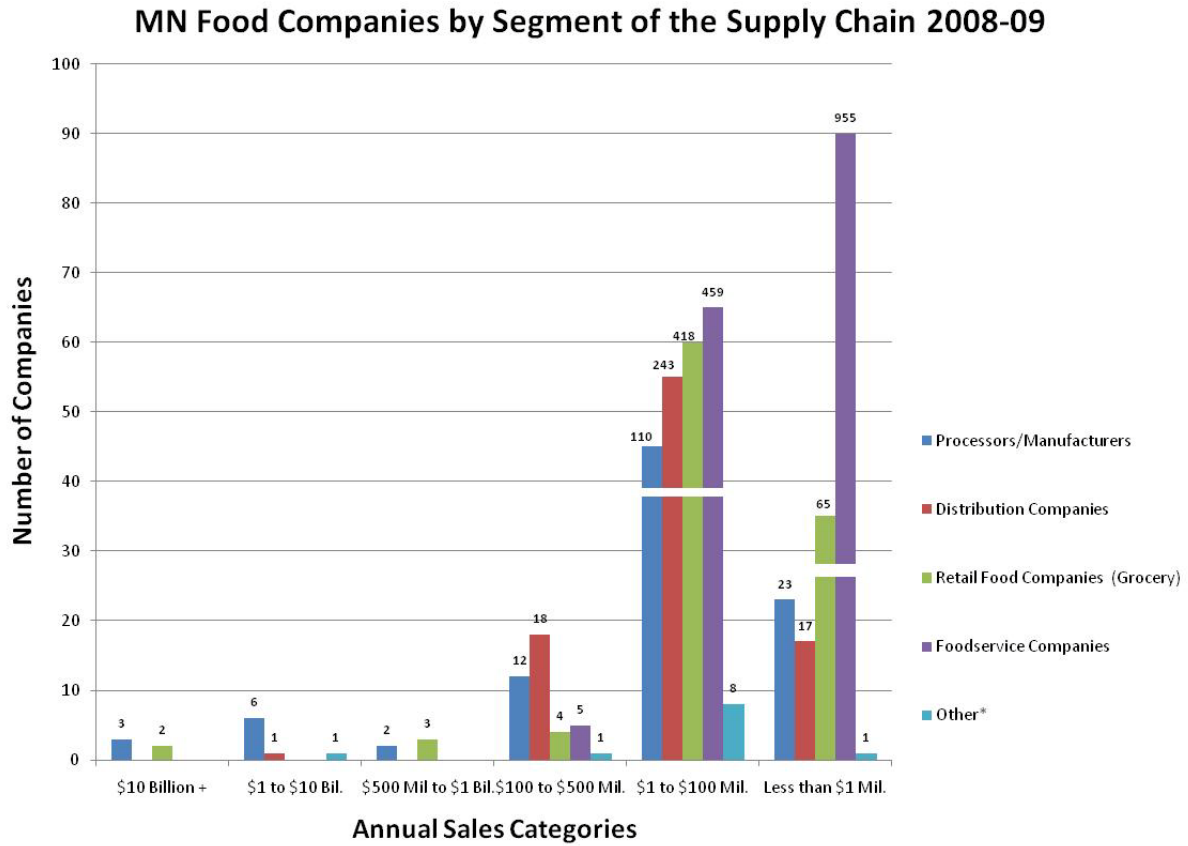

Table 4 examines the types of foods or food services in each segment of the supply chain. They are listed with the percent of the total companies in each segment. For example, dairy companies make up 14% of the Minnesota food processors/manufacturers. Frozen food manufacturing and miscellaneous food manufacturing (cereal, snack, confectionary, spice etc.) make up 42% of the processor/manufacturer companies. General line grocery (36%) is the most prevalent business type among the wholesaler/distributor companies, with supermarkets (52%) representing more than half of the retail companies. The top eighteen companies are EXCLUDED from Table 4 because they operate in multiple channels of the supply chain.

APPENDIX

How Does The Food Industry Center Interact with these and Other Food Companies?

The Food Industry Center established an industry advisory board in 1995 chaired by Michael Wright, then CEO of SUPERVALU. It was populated by other CEO's and Vice Presidents of food companies from Texas to Michigan with many Minnesota companies represented. This board, and others in their companies, met with faculty from two colleges at the University of Minnesota to advise us about salient research topics, educate us about the emerging changes in the industry, and provide us tours of stores, warehouses, and processing plants.

In 2005, this advisory board evolved into the Center's Board of Executives, an executive level board comprised of leaders from The Food Industry Center's Sponsoring Member companies. The board stepped up to replace the Center's initial funding from the Sloan Foundation and meets annually to help set strategic direction and secure financial sponsorship. Senior managers from the Center's sponsoring companies make up a second board – the Program Leadership Board – which meets twice a year to review research and educational projects and provide ongoing advice about industry needs. The Program Leadership Board keeps the Center's faculty and research fellows informed on the latest industry trends and engage students as interns and eventually employees. Providing students with career paths in the food industry is part of The Food Industry Center's mission and the industry boards play an important role in achieving that mission.

Source Data

The data for this report was extracted from Dun and Bradstreet's Million Dollar Database in June 2008. The online database is licensed from Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. ("D&B") to public and academic libraries for use by their patrons. Research for this report was conducted via the University of Minnesota Libraries subscription (<http://www.lib.umn.edu/cgi-bin/mdd.cgi>).

The Million Dollar Database on the Internet (MDDI) from Dun and Bradstreet lists over 1.6 million operations in the US. It includes private and public companies with either sales of one million dollars, 20+ employees, or those branch locations with 50+ employees. Entries include contact information, executives, sales, employees, industry codes, and business descriptions. Each firm is assigned a Dun's number to create links for parent companies and their branches. Search features allow finding companies for viewing, sorting, printing and downloading based on criteria like SIC, total employees, legal status, annual U.S. sales, etc.

Minnesota Food Companies Database (MFCD): Inclusion Criteria for Records

The "Minnesota Food Companies Database" (MFCD), created as part of this project, is comprised of records from the Million Dollar Database that were selected by the following criteria:

- (1) The physical location of the operation was specified as Minnesota, USA
- (2) The primary North American Industry Classification System (NAICS) code associated with the operation indicated activities involving food suitable for human consumption, either as a manufacturer, processor, trader, or as food service operator. Table 1A lists the Primary NAICS activities associated with the records in the MFED.

- (3) Annual Sales was equal to Corporate Sales, and parent company explicitly not indicated to be outside Minnesota

The records in the MDDI include establishments, often with no way of identifying whether the record reflects a company or a part of a company. The researchers employed their local knowledge in narrowing down on the food companies. These include only those foodservice outlets like a McDonald's or a Taco Bell which was listed as having an owner (franchisee) separate from the corporate companies of these chains e.g., an individual Dairy Queen is a part of the MFCD, but International Dairy Queen, Inc. is not. Subsidiaries of bigger parent corporations in Minnesota were also not included if the subsidiaries could be linked to the parent companies based on the information available in the MDDI or the knowledge the researchers had. Based on the above criteria, a total of 2,357 records were identified from the Million Dollar Database as food operations in the Minnesota.

More on NAICS

The NAICS (pronounced Nakes) was developed as the standard for use by Federal statistical agencies in classifying business establishments for the collection, analysis, and publication of statistical data related to the business economy of the U.S. NAICS was developed under the auspices of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), and adopted in 1997 to replace the old Standard Industrial Classification (SIC) system. It was also developed in cooperation with the statistical agencies of Canada and Mexico to establish a 3-country standard that allows for a high level of comparability in business statistics among the three countries. The U.S. Census Bureau assigns one NAICS code to each establishment based on its primary activity (the activity that generates the most revenue for the establishment) to collect, tabulate, analyze, and disseminate statistical data describing the economy of the United States.

The records in the MDDI are listed as one of the following: (1) Headquarter – a location that has other locations (branches, single locations, or other headquarter locations) reporting to it; (2) Branch – a secondary location of a company that has no locations reporting to it; or (3) Single Location – either a subsidiary that has no locations reporting to it or a company with only one location. A subsidiary is a corporation that is controlled by another corporation through ownership of greater than 50% of its voting stock and may have a different name than the controlling corporation. Subsidiaries that were listed as a single location in the MDDI and for which the Annual Sales were reported to be the same as Corporate Sales, were listed as a company in the MFCD even though they might be controlled by a larger corporation.

Primary NAICS Activities of Operations in the MFCD

Most companies have more than one kind of activity associated with it. In this report, however, inclusion criterion for the records in the MFCD was based solely on the primary activity (as denoted by the primary NAICS code) reported by the operation.

No operations within Agriculture, Forestry, Fishing and Hunting (NAICS double digit code 11), were included in the MFCD. Within the NAICS Manufacturing category (code 31), all types of food and beverage (alcoholic and non alcoholic) manufacturing operations were included in the database. Grocery stores, supermarkets, warehouse clubs, specialty food stores (meat, fish, and vegetable markets), baked and confectionary goods stores, liquor stores, convenience stores, and vending machine operators were included in retail trade (NAICS code 44-45). Similarly, all grocery and beverage related wholesale operations were included in wholesale trade (NAICS code 44). Refrigerated warehousing and farm products storage operations were included under warehousing (NAICS code 49), but there is the possibility these operations could house more than food products. Finally, all food service operations including full and limited service restaurants, bars and pubs, and contractors and caterers were included under accommodation and food service (NAICS code 72).
